Taft Tags Troops Program 'Political Question'

Ohioan Says Congress' OK Is Must

4-Point Argument Given By Senator

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26—Sen. Taft laid down a four-point argument today against the European defense project and demanded that the troops program be settled by Congress as a "political question."

The Senate GOP leader from Ohio warned that without a limitation on the U.S. contribution of troops to Europe the nation's military buildup threatens an ultimate economic "breakdown."

Sen. Ferguson, (R) Mich., agreed that Congress should decide the troops issue on a political rather than a military basis. He said: "That's how the President treats it."

Taft was to testify late today in the troops-for-Europe hearings. Former Sen. John Sherman Cooper, (R) Ky., who favors sending troops, and Sen. Wherry, (R) Neb., who opposes it, are the day's other witnesses.

Taft said the administration's program, with a planned armed force of 3.5 million men, would run the federal budget to $80 million.

TO THIS TAFT added $20 billion in state and local spending—for a $100 billion total—and said:

"That's more than we can stand without inflation and an ultimate breakdown."

Informed that Gov. Thomas E. Dewey had urged the "biggest possible vote" against the Wherry resolution to restrict sending troops, Taft said:

"I'm for the Wherry resolution and intend to vote for it. My argument is in favor of approval by Congress of a definite agreement with the other nations and a limitation on our contribution."

Taft summarized his position with these four points:

1—The question is whether the United States will establish an international European army, not just whether "we will send two divisions" to such an army.

2—It is a political question, not a military one, and should be settled by Congress, not the President.

3—The European project is in "very dangerous form" because there is "no army promised sufficient to defend Europe." Any Army now in sight, he said, is "completely inadequate."

4—It is dangerous because if there is no limitation this country will be committed to "more"

Old Texas Feud Is Ended With Fatal Gun Duel

MINEOLA, Tex., Feb. 26—An old grudge was blamed today for a gun duel reminiscent of the Old West in which two Texans, standing 10 feet apart, emptied their weapons and killed each other.

The victims of the gun duel in Mineola cafe yesterday were Joe Henderson, 45, a railroad conductor, and Rufus Browning, 55, a cattle dealer.

A waitress, Mrs. Kate Womack, the only witness to the duel, told authorities that after Henderson was slain, Browning, who was mortally wounded, painfully opened a pocketknife, crawled to his foe and slashed the body.

Browning still was alive when Police Chief Bill Knippel arrived. The chief said the two men had been enemies for a long time, but he did not know the cause of the quarrel.

According to Mrs. Womack, Henderson entered the cafe for a cup of coffee shortly after Browning arrived and shouted at his foe:

"Keep your hands where they're at. I'm going to kill you."

Browning calmly replied he was only going to drink his coffee and did so. Then Browning got up and slowly backed toward the door.

Suddenly both men whipped out guns and emptied them at each other.

DRAFT-UMT IS DEBATED

Bradley Says 250,000 GIs Now Assigned To Korea

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26—Gen. Omar Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, declared today that approximately 250,000 American troops are now fighting in Korea.

Bradley's disclosure was made before the House Armed Services Committee at a resumption of its hearings on the Draft-Universal Military Training legislation.

He gave no figures on the number of other United Nations forces in Korea.

The nation's highest military leader solemnly warned the committee that possibly 10 to 20 years of unsettled international conditions may be expected. He stated:

"There is little chance that the ominous threats to our security will decrease. The conditions under which we labor may persist for ten, fifteen or twenty years. Our only sensible military answer is to have our citizens adequately prepared and organized to take up our defense."

BRADLEY was called to present his views on the committee's proposal that men be drafted at the age of 18 and one-half years with a proviso they are not to be sent into combat until they reach 19. The Defense

86 Are Arrested At Cock Fight

PONTIAC, Mich., Feb. 26—Eighty-six persons, arrested during a cock fight on a lavish farm north of here, faced court trials today.

The cock fight spectators, including six women, sat engrossed around a fluorescent lighted pit when sheriff's deputies and humane society authorities staged a raid yesterday. Seventy-five live cocks, equipped with razor-like spurs, and 15 dead birds were confiscated.

A police alarm was broadcast after his wife, the former Virginia Sinclair, adopted daughter of Oil Magnate Harry Sinclair, said her husband left their Bel-Air home at 6:30 p. m. last Friday, ostensibly for business in Bakersfield and Paso Robles, Cal.

She said the graying 44-year-old, 200-pound prince failed to keep business appointments in either city and that a check showed he had not registered at any of the hotels at which he usually stays.

His wife expressed fears for his safety.

Police said Mrs. Mdivani did not explain the reason for fearing he came to harm other than that his disappearance was unusual.

The Mdivani brothers won as their wives women who were considered among the most beautiful, wealthy, talented or most socially prominent in the world.

JOHNSTON READIES MOVE

Concessions To Labor Hinted By Wage Experts

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26—Economic Stabilizer Eric Johnston is expected to send the ten percent wage ceiling formula back to a reestablished Wage Stabilization Board today or tomorrow with recommendations for major concessions to labor.

Informed sources said that, if Johnston takes this action, it will mean that organized labor has agreed to go back to the board, thus reestablishing the tripartite machinery.

The three labor members walked out and later resigned after the six industry and public members approved a 10 percent wage ceiling the night of Feb. 15. Johnston spent last week conferring with President Truman, Defense Mobilizer Charles Wilson and other officials and in hearing a full presentation of labor's case.

While he has maintained a strict silence, Labor sources say they understand he has this in mind:

1. SENDING THE wage ceiling regulation back to the board to be whipped into "shape instead of trying to modify it himself."

2. Making recommendations to the board as to how he thinks the regulation approved by the industry and public members should be changed. This would not include a change in the 10 percent ceiling, but it would provide for revisions which Labor feels are equally important.

3. Directing the board to recognize fully in the new regulation existing labor-management contracts, including cost-of-living escalator clauses and annual productivity improvement contracts; to make full provision for inequities and "hardship cases," and to exempt welfare funds and pensions from control.

Johnston is considering the question of increasing the membership of the board from nine to 18 members to give it additional manpower to handle a heavy work load of labor cases.

Stabilization officials say that, when Johnston acts on the wage

Mac Says Reds Must Be Beaten

NEW YORK, Feb. 26—Gen. Douglas MacArthur warned last night that unless Communism is defeated in Korea it will be able to build "a war-making potential to point at the heart of Europe and America."

In a specially-cabled message to the fourth convention of anti-Communist organizations in New York, MacArthur declared:

"The issue is drawn and the predatory Communist adventure must be decisively defeated."

David eventually came to Hollywood. His youth and courtly manner won the heart of Mae Murray, then at the peak of her career. His father cabled his brother, Serge, then in Texas, to stop the marriage.

Serge's trip to Hollywood resulted in his marriage to Pola Negri, then another reigning favorite of the screen. She was maid of honor and the late Rudolph Valentino was best man at David's wedding.

Mae Murray filed a second divorce suit against David in June, 1933, declaring that he was a charming and romantic lover but too possessive and jealous.

David and Serge were accused in 1934 of diverting funds of the Pacific Oil Co. to their own use. The brothers, then without funds, hoped to obtain financial aid from their sister-in-law, Barbara Hutton Mdivani, who had fallen under the spell of their brother Alexis and had become his wife. The aid was not forthcoming and the trial ended in a jury stalemate.

The Mdivanis dropped from the public eye following trials resulting from the charges of misusing oil company funds, until the Spring of 1935 when it became known Barbara Hutton was divorcing Alexis to marry County Haugwitz-Reventlow.

Alexis was killed a few months later in an automobile accident while visiting his sister,

Pity The Dog Warden; He Says Dogs Dislike Him

Ralph Wallace, Pickaway County dog warden, has discovered a new type of occupational hazard.

The dogs don't like him.

"It's a fact," said Wallace sadly. "When they see me coming they beat it. Big dogs and little dogs. When they see me, they scoot. Maybe the name on the side of the truck has something to do with it. Maybe they can read."

Wallace said that last month he picked up "between 18 and 20 dogs with distemper." He said that some of these were picked up outside the city limits of Circleville.

"What's happening," he said, "is that people are discovering the dogs are sick and, instead of calling a veterinarian, are taking them beyond the city limits and turning them loose."

"OTHER DOGS are being picked up simply because their owners are permitting them to run loose without collars and tags."

The dog warden said that on several occasions dog owners have called him to complain about pets being picked up.

When asked about collars and tags, Wallace went on, these persons generally reveal that they have both items at home, but have been unable to keep them on the dogs.

The animals, apparently, take a dim view of such wearing apparel.

"With Spring coming," said

Wallace, "it's important that people keep their dogs at home if they want to avoid complaints and possible legal action from persons whose gardens have been excavated by the animals."

Mud Clogs Roads; Air Units Busy

New Patrols Job Into Enemy Lines

TOKYO, Feb. 27—(Tuesday)—Hundreds of tons of supplies were airlifted Monday to United Nations forces fighting through mud and flooding rivers to exploit a virtual rout of Red troops on the east central Korean front.

As Flying Boxcars poured supplies in a steady stream to the Allied troops struggling against the handicap of mud-clogged surface supply routes, fighter planes and B-29 Superfort bombers delivered smashing blows at enemy concentrations.

Meanwhile, tactical plans of the hard-hitting United Nations troops were discussed at a conference between Lt. Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, U. S. Eighth Army commander, and his top generals on the central front.

Growing strength of the Allied forces in their "killer offensive" was emphasized by announcement in Washington by Gen. Omar Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, that 250,000 American soldiers are now fighting in Korea. He did not give figures on troops of other nations in the conflict.

THE AIRLIFT PLANES parachuted 300 tons of combat material to the Allied forces, making a total of 1,200 tons in six days.

Fighters and light bombers flew 450 sorties up to 6 p. m. Monday, destroying or damaging more than 100 enemy vehicles, blasting rail lines and destroying two railway bridges.

Big B-29 bombers from Okinawa and Japanese bases rained 190 tons of high explosives on railroad bridges and marshaling yards in Pyongyang, Huichon, Suchon and other points in North Korea.

In the Suchon strike, the Superforts were attacked by six to eight Russian-built MIG-15 jets and gunners of the bombers drove them off. No damage on either side was reported.

In the center of the front, UN troops smashed several scattered counterattacks by Chinese Reds and jabbed new patrols into enemy lines, one of them across the Han river near Seoul to within 32 miles of the 38th Parallel.

Gains of two to four miles were slogged out by Allied units despite miring mud and heavy floods.

Lt. Gen. E. M. Almond, commander of the 10th Corps, declared that two North Korean corps opposing his troops had been totally destroyed in "combat effectiveness" by the Allied drive.

He said the more than 60,000 Reds on the east flank of the line had been put in "virtual rout."

Almond said that his 10th Corps has been destroying Communist troops at a rate of more than 1,200 per day over a 53-day period—a total of 63,600 enemy troops.

ALMOND'S CORPS is only one of three Eighth Army corps engaged in destroying Reds with "Operation Killer," which has

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26—Congressional leaders said today that President Truman will ask Congress to increase rates on second class mail.

Last Of 'Marrying Mdivanis' Is Said Missing

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 26—David Mdivani, last of the three brothers from the little principality of Georgia who called themselves princes and whose marital episodes won them the title of the "Marrying Mdivanis" and recognition as "great lovers," was reported missing today.

A police alarm was broadcast after his wife, the former Virginia Sinclair, adopted daughter of Oil Magnate Harry Sinclair, said her husband left their Bel-Air home at 6:30 p. m. last Friday, ostensibly for business in Bakersfield and Paso Robles, Cal.

She said the graying 44-year-old, 200-pound prince failed to keep business appointments in either city and that a check showed he had not registered at any of the hotels at which he usually stays.

His wife expressed fears for his safety.

Police said Mrs. Mdivani did not explain the reason for fearing he came to harm other than that his disappearance was unusual.

The Mdivani brothers won as their wives women who were considered among the most beautiful, wealthy, talented or most socially prominent in the world.

Mdivani, once the husband of Silent Film Star Mae Murray and father of her son, Koran, was wearing a gray suit and the tan overcoat when he left home. He was driving an expensive 1948 automobile with 1951 Idaho license plates.

Nina, Serge, David, Roussadana and Alexis were the children of Zacharian and Elizabeth Mdivani. The father was a military governor of Georgia under the czar. He never laid claim to royalty.

His children all took royal titles, however, when the family fled to Paris after the revolution.

Serge and David made their first trip to America to study at Andover as guests of wealthy friends.

David eventually came to Hollywood. His youth and courtly manner won the heart of Mae Murray, then at the peak of her career. His father cabled his brother, Serge, then in Texas, to stop the marriage.

Serge's trip to Hollywood resulted in his marriage to Pola Negri, then another reigning favorite of the screen. She was maid of honor and the late Rudolph Valentino was best man at David's wedding.

Alexis was killed a few months later in an automobile accident while visiting his sister, Roussadana, in Spain.

Alexis left a considerable estate—Barbara had settled a sum of money on him—in which David and Serge shared.

Serge was killed in March, 1936, when he was kicked in the head by a polo pony. The fatal accident occurred a few weeks after his third marriage to Heiress Louise Van Alen, who formerly had been the wife of Alexis. Serge also had been married and divorced from Opera Singer Mary McCormick.

Serge left a $1.5 million estate to be divided among his wife, David and his sisters.

David married the Sinclair heiress in September, 1944.

accounted for more than 120,000 dead, wounded and captured Chinese and North Korean Communists.

Chinese Reds in the central sector were desperately attempting to regroup with heavy reinforcements pouring down from the Manchurian border.

The Chinese mounted three bugle-blowing counterattacks Sunday and Monday against Republic of Korea (ROK) troops west of Hoengsong, bomb-blasted Central Korean communications hub 50 miles east of Seoul.

The Roks, who would have been unnerved two months ago by the noisy type of enemy counterattacks, this time easily buried them back.

Three American columns, poised on the southern outskirts of Hoengsong, again punched patrols into the town which lies 34 miles below Parallel 38. The patrols pulled back after drawing sharp small arms fire from Chinese dug in in the hills north and west of the town.

An Eighth Army communique said that generally there was a little enemy activity all along the front Monday, but the Reds were continuing their northward withdrawal on the east central front.

The communique reported that on the eastern flank of the central front an estimated 600 to 700 enemy troops were dug in 18 miles north of Pyongyang which Almond's 10th Corps spearheads captured last week. Pyongyang lies 40 miles below the 38th Parallel and 26 miles southeast of Hoengsong.

MEANWHILE, naval units off the Korean coast "silenced" Red artillery northwest of Seoul and for the 11th straight day pounded communications facilities at Wonsan, 80 miles north of the 38th Parallel on the east coast.

The Navy reported that "vital road arteries and highway junctions leading into Central Korea have been under continuous fire."

In Washington, the Navy said that the U.S. has several all-weather land communications to the important North Korean port city of Wonsan and is in a position to conduct an amphibious landing there.

Rear Adm. Arleigh Burke, deputy chief of staff for the Far Eastern Fleet, said "the enemy will never know whether we are going to land at Wonsan or not."

Burke, in Washington for consultation, said that almost continuous bombardment has prevented the Communists from moving land traffic through the Wonsan region, and that the threat of a landing has held 150,000 Chinese Communist troops in the area.

'Miracle Of God' Helps Dad Save Lad From River

NEW YORK, Feb. 26 — A 51-year-old carpenter rescued his six-year-old son from the East River after the boy fell into a manhole and was swept by water through 100 feet of drain pipe into the river.

The father, Martin Byrne, said, "it was a miracle of God. I don't know how to swim."

Byrne and his son, Bruce, were walking yesterday when the father turned his head to greet a friend. When he turned back, Bruce was gone.

The father saw an open manhole and looked down on a hunch. He saw the boy being swept along by the rushing water.

Byrne climbed down the manhole and pursued the boy in three feet of water. When he reached the pipe's outlet at the river's edge he saw Bruce floundering in the water a few feet away.

Byrne plunged into the river, somehow reached the boy's side and then towed him back along the drain pipe to the manhole where passersby helped him and the boy to reach the street.

Clinton County Health Progress Told To Confab

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Feb. 26 — Dr. Edmond K. Yantes of Wilmington, O., has told a group of farm and health leaders from across the nation the secret of solving rural health problems is community cooperation.

Yantes told the sixth National Conference on Rural Health about the Clinton County Health Council, of which he is secretary.

He said the council, composed of 27 organizations and 14 villages and townships, went to work on nurse recruitment as its first project after its inception in 1947. As a result, six girls are in training through loans made without interest and payable after graduation.

Next the council conducted a survey among 17,901 individuals in 5,452 families, to determine the major health problems.

Dr. Yantes said this survey developed the following seven-point program for 1951:

Expansion of the nurses recruitment program and loan fund; expansion of a program to eliminate brucellosis; a water supply and sewage disposal campaign which will be the theme of the 4-H Club program; promotion of vaccination and immunization, and establishment of well-baby clinics and prenatal classes.

Development of a long-range school health program, and finally, aid to cancer and tuberculosis societies.

Dr. Yantes said the council has sponsored two Southwest Ohio rural health conferences as part of its primary purpose of keeping interest in health activities alive and strong.

Czech Five-Year Plan Flopping

PRAGUE, Feb. 26 — The Communist-dominated Czechoslovakian government today reintroduced bread and flour rationing in what seemed an indirect admission that the five-year plan in agriculture had failed.

The action of the Czechoslovakian government came on the heels of an announcement in Budapest that Hungary's five-year plan in agriculture, coal mining and heavy industry had failed.

In a speech to the annual congress of the Hungarian Communist Party, Deputy Premier Matyas Rakosi admitted there was a "crisis" in the domestic food supply.

tee, declared that Congress would be derelict in its duty if it fails to provide the kind of a program contemplated by the UMT part of the bill.

The senator said:

"I SHOULD FEEL we are not doing our job unless we included a training program for the post-emergency period to assure a steady flow of trained men into the reserves."

Senate Armed Services Chairman Russell, (D) Ga., said he believes Congress has come to the conclusion UMT is necessary. For the first time, he added, Congress appears in a mood to approve UMT.

But Sen. Taft, (R) Ohio, said he is inclined at this point to oppose UMT. The Republican policy leader explained that some things in the manpower bill need clarification which he indicated would come in debate.

Taft also said he definitely opposes the lack of an expiration date in the bill. He said the insertion of a time limit might be one way of attacking the UMT provision, which so far has escaped controversy.

UMT would come into effect when international tensions have eased to the extent that the induction period could be cut from 26 to four or six months. Inductees then would be trained but would not go on active duty. Upon discharge, they would go into the reserves.

Senate Democratic Leader McFarland, Ariz., said he is hopeful final action on the UMT-draft bill can be reached in three or four days.

U.S. Is Forced To Buy Wool On Inflated Mart

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26 — The United States is compelled to buy millions of pounds of wool for a war reserve in the inflated world market less than a year after getting rid of a huge supply of surplus wool held in government warehouses.

Officials of the Agriculture Department are bidding in the world's markets for 30 million pounds of wool for the war reserve. They are competing for dwindling world wool stocks with other nations alarmed over their national wool situations in the face of wartime demands.

The relatively small world wool stocks, plus the active bidding of other nations, officials say, is forcing prices the U. S. must pay to extremely high levels.

One official says the tragedy of the situation is that last March the Agriculture Department still owned almost 30 million pounds of wool—the amount the Army wants for an initial war reserve. That of course was before war broke out in Korea.

But a week after the Korean outbreak, the government still held about one-half million pounds. At that time the Agriculture Department urged the Munitions Board to order a halt to governmental wool sales, but was turned down. A short time later all the wool was sold.

And officials point out that wool prices have doubled in the world market since Korea.

Sabotage Hinted In City Fire

COLUMBUS, Feb. 26 — Investigation of a $5,000 fire which damaged equipment of a Columbus bus firm continued today after a company spokesman reported possible sabotage to police Saturday.

John Cluff, general manager of the Columbus-Celina Coach Co., told investigators that Friday's fire climaxed a series of incidents which led him to suspect someone might be trying to sabotage his firm.

They're Not Sure About Paradise

JAKARTA, Feb. 26 — At least one group in Indonesia isn't certain today that people know they're living on this side of Paradise.

An organization calling itself the "Commission for the Defense of Islam" has objected to the showing in Palembang of a new Indonesian film of the book "Between Heaven and Earth." Says the commission:

"The people of Palembang are not yet sufficiently mature to make comparisons."

Lausche's Budget To Be Given State Legislature By Thursday

COLUMBUS, Feb. 26 — Governor Lausche will submit his budget to the Ohio Legislature this week.

The budget, promised by Thursday, is the most important piece of legislation which must be enacted by the General Assembly. It will be introduced in the house by Rep. J. Frank McClure (R-Ashland) as chairman of the house finance committee.

The measure, which provides the funds for the operation of all state departments as well as all subsidies, will call for the expenditure of well over a half-billion dollars in general revenue funds alone, exclusive of highway and conservation funds and federal assistance.

The lawmakers begin their ninth — and busiest — week tonight with plenty of other important business before them.

The senate has two major interests—the second hearing in a probe of civil service and the beginning of testimony by opponents of the proposed belt conveyor between Lake Erie and Ohio river ports.

The house votes on two important measures—a bill to have the state take possession of $1.25 million in assets of the defunct rural rehabilitation corporation and a measure to make relief chiseling a felony.

Under the first measure, the director of agriculture would receive from the federal government the assets, which include some $200,000 in cash and the remainder in loans to low income farm families. He then could continue to make such loans to Ohio farmers.

The relief chiseling bill would make anyone found guilty of obtaining relief assistance fraudulently liable to a fine of $500 and three months in jail if the amount obtained were under $100, and subject to up to three years imprisonment if the amount exceeded $100.

After the full senate session tonight, the judiciary committee will hear from opponents, chiefly the railroads, of the proposed belt conveyor between Lorain and East Liverpool.

The bill being considered by the committee would grant the right to condemn land for a right of way for the $210 million 130-mile overland conveyor. This would be done by giving the conveyor status as a public utility.

The society is made up of junior and senior boys and girls in the county high schools whose grades rank them in the upper bracket of the classes.

Officers of the society are: Betty Skinner of Atlanta, president; Cooke Metzger of Williamsport, vice - president; Mary Krimmel of Jackson, secretary; Charles Thompson of Salt Creek, chaplain; and Robert Haller of Monroe and Melvin Baker of Scioto, sergeants at arms.

MEANWHILE, the Connally-Russell substitute for the Wherry resolution was made public. Little altered from its original draft, it declares that:

1—"The President should consult with Congress, reporting every six months on implementation of the Atlantic treaty, and 'make certain' that the European partners are doing their share. This section cites 'additional units of ground troops.'"

2—"The threat of American and North Atlantic security 'makes it necessary' for the U. S. to station 'abroad such units of our armed forces as may be necessary and appropriate' for North Atlantic defense."

Food Inspection Here Delayed By Council Panel

Circleville health department conducts a sanitation inspection of local stores handling food at least once a year.

This year the inspection has been delayed.

Health Commissioner C. O. Leist explained that the reason for the delay is buried in a city council committee. It is a proposed bill to require licenses for foodhandlers in the city.

"We thought we could run the sanitation inspection and whatever inspections would be required under the new ordinance at the same time," Leist said. "But it looks as though we'll have to go ahead with the sanitation inspection alone."

E. L. Montgomery, chairman of council health committee, said the bill has not been brought out on the floor yet because studies of similar ordinances in other cities have not been completed.

"If we're going to have a health ordinance, we might as well have a good one," he declared.

The bill would provide a check against the spread of tuberculosis and other infectious diseases by requiring periodic physical examinations and licensing of food handlers.

The annual sanitation inspection conducted by health authorities is designed to prevent unsanitary handling and storage of food in local stores.

ARMY NURSES WORK IN KOREA

Battered Bank Building Used To House Hospital

IN KOREA, Feb. 26 — The Army nurse stood on the blood-stained floor of the operating room—a battered bank building in a Korean town less than ten miles from the frontlines and explained why she and her sister nurses were there.

"If we were not," she said, "hundreds of boys who are alive today might have died. That makes all the inconveniences seem meaningless."

The nurse, Major Eunice S. Coleman of Santa Monica, Cal., heads a detachment of 13 women stationed with the First Mobile Army Surgical Hospital—called "Mash" for short.

As she spoke and as the doctors conducted round-the-clock surgical work, the big 155mm howitzers shook the windows with intermittent firing only a few hundred yards away. The angry buzz of a helicopter landing on the hospital grounds with a newly wounded GI and the clashing of gears of the ambulances, steadily arriving and departing, added to the din through which the hospital staff worked.

ANOTHER NURSE, Capt. Mary Ward of San Francisco, standing in a receiving tent, said:

"It's odd being a woman this close to the front. But you get used to it. The first night after I arrived here and I heard the artillery fire, I couldn't sleep. 'But you couldn't keep think-

Fearless Fagan Gets Job With Mills Circus

Fearless Fagan, the 200-pound lion rejected by the Army when he tried to enlist with his master, is no longer homeless today. Fearless has joined the Mills Bros. Circus in Columbus.

The three-year-old king of beasts arrived Sunday from Los Angeles with the brother of Pvt. Floyd O. Humeston. The soldier is probably the only GI to receive a special leave to get his pet lion off an Army reservation.

The circus, which winters now on Columbus Fairgrounds, offered the lion a home when he was evicted by a zoo and a humane society shelter who said he ate too much.

Fagan's train fare was $91.67, but it's all right with Earl Humeston, the animal's new keeper. He's happy Fagan has a job and that he is included.

Fearless ate a snack upon his arrival at the circus grounds consisting of ten pounds of horse meat washed down with a gallon of water.

Fagan might well now be calling Circleville, instead of Columbus, his home. However, the Mills Bros. and officials of Pickaway County Agricultural Society, operators of the local fairgrounds, could not get together last Fall on rental details.

The circus had spent three winter seasons here, wanted to return. Instead, local fairgrounds chiefs rented space to a carnival at a price far less than the circus had been paying. The circus had not even play here this year. It generally opened its season in Circleville.

Paris Is Hit By Bus Strike

PARIS, Feb. 26 — Paris bus service came to a halt and subway travel was cut by 50 percent today when two non-Communist unions went out on a 24-hour strike for a wage increase.

The walkout, which involved approximately 20,000 workers, was to back up demands for an 18-dollar a month pay boost.

ing of the guns for there was too much to do—too many boys had to have attention without delay."

In the operating room, three doctors worked feverishly. Two nurses and two non-coms were assisting them.

Lt. Col. Carl T. Dubuy of Tulsa, Tex., the hospital commandant, didn't refer to the patients lying on the table by name; they were the "humorous" case, the "hand" case and the "belly" case.

He explained:

"In time, the patients lose personality because there are so many of them. We have doctors and nurses who have worked as long as 36 hours without a break. We just know the men by the nature of their wounds. We don't have time for anything else."

The operating room which once had been the main lobby of the bank was furnished with a minimum of equipment. A battered Coca Cola refrigerator and ingeniously constructed rubber tubing provided the vital scrub basin facilities the surgeons needed.

THE DOCTORS themselves, Capt. Dexter Ball of Santa Anita, Cal., Capt. Jack Wilsey of New York City, and Capt. William Crepps of San Francisco, and the two nurses, Capt. Marion Benninger of Shellington, Pa., and Capt. Jane Thurness, of Columbus, O., provide a mixture of the atmosphere of a hospital and an Army camp.

Below their white surgical gowns was the unmistakable green of Army fatigues and muddy combat boots.

The hospital, constructed with a minimum of equipment to provide for maximum mobility actually has almost every vital healing device.

A complete dental office with equipment for construction of false teeth was set up in what had once been the bank president's office.

The dentists, Capt. Albert J. DiMatteo of Jackson Heights, N. Y., and Capt. Edward Carriber of Beaumont, Tex., worked with improvised chairs and stripped down dental drills.

A laboratory and pharmacy were included in the hospital.

Colonel Dubuy said his unit landed with the Tenth Corps at Inchon, escaped the small arms fire of an ambush in Central Korea, and remained on the Hungnam beachhead until the last few days before the evacuation was completed.

TODAY'S THE DAY; SO, SMILE!!!

National Smile Week, 1951, opens today. It is a week for the Joy Scouts, who are the people who smile.

Founded, fostered and stimulated by a national committee of which famed smiler and actor Joe E. Brown is chairman, it is designed as a week for spreading sunshine and happiness.

It asks no contributions, charges no dues, demands no extra time. You're a Joy Scout in good standing if you smile, and make someone else smile.

What if the income tax man is just around the next corner? Smile!

What if the boss is grumpy and hard to live with today? Smile!

What if the cop on the corner gives you a bad time in traffic? Smile! . . . And, Mr. Policeman, just for a week, don't bawl that poor driver out. . . Smile!

That's the way of this week.

"Try bringing at least one extra smile of happiness to somebody every day this week," urges Chairman Brown. "You may never know how or where the smile strikes home. . . just which weary heart or spirit your smile may help. But this much you can be sure of: your smile will brighten your own day and your own life."

On that happy note, this special week is now officially open. Everybody is invited to be a Joy Scout.

WON'T MILK THE COWS

ONE OF the several score persons to benefit from distribution of the tremendous fortune of the late Hetty Green is Leonard Almy, an Oklahoma tenant farmer. Almy is a distant cousin of the late Mrs. Matthew Wilks, daughter of Mrs. Green, whose operations startled the financial world several generations ago. Hetty's daughter left a fortune of $125,000,000. Almy's share will be $100,000.

Almy was doing the chores on his rented farm when he was called to a neighbor's telephone to hear the good news. He was not unduly excited, his neighbors say, but did have something to say about what he would do with the money.

First of all, he wants a farm "with a deed to it." Now 61 years old, he admits that he had been concerned about security in his old age. He hated to think he might be compelled to go on a state pension. Or that he might have to be buried by the county. Now these fears have vanished, and the security he longed for has been provided.

But there will be no life of luxury for the Almys. No new motor cars. No quitting work. No matter what happens, he says, life will continue on the land. There's always something to be done," Almy explained, "and $100,000 doesn't get the cows milked."

Truman May Go On Air | Believe Forthright Speech
To End 'Defeatist' Talk | Might Dispell Uneasiness

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—Some of President Truman's advisers are urging him to go on radio and make a frank speech to offset "defeatist" views being expressed in some quarters in Washington. Administration officials are worried about the alarmist reports getting out to the country in various news columns and from some congressional sources.

They fear that a wrong impression is being peddled to the nation about the lack of military preparedness, the unsoundness of our Allies and other matters. Mr. Truman may make the frankest, hardest-hitting speech of his career if he decides on a nationwide broadcast to dispell these fears and report progress in the mobilization effort.

● HOOVER'S VIEWS—The Senate's top Democratic spokesman on foreign policy was noticeably reluctant about inviting former President Herbert Hoover to express his views on the "troops-to-Europe" issue.

Chairman Tom Connally (D, Texas, of the Senate foreign relations committee, has made it plain that he does not share the feeling of respect accorded Hoover—the only living ex-President—by President Truman.

Every time Connally was asked about Hoover's appearance before his committee, he replied that he did not want to "use" the former President's testimony but that if some other members insisted, he would go along with the idea.

In contrast, President Truman invited Hoover to sit in at a White

George E. Sokolsky's
These Days

The 1952 budget, which may or may not be passed as is, amounts to $71,594,000,000. That compares with the 1951 budget of $47,210,000,000. Receipts for 1951 were estimated at $44,512,000,000; for 1952 at $55,138,000,000. That means that the government will run short about $16,456,000,000, which will have to be added to the national debt.

Of the $71,594,000,000 which the government plans to expend in 1952, $41,421,000,000 will be expended by the military services.

The President is employing the double budget method, which means that he adds to the budget separate appropriations, loan and contract authorizations part of which will be spent in 1952 and part in subsequent years. These bring the amount up to $94,400,000, to which is to be added an additional $4,100,000,000 that is to liquidate contract authorizations approved by Congress in prior years, for which he needs funds. The total will be $98,500,000,000.

This is the third largest appropriation in American history, being exceeded only by 1943 and 1944 when we were actually at war and spending like mad against time. No one in those years could tell how long the war would last or where we would be hit and therefore we spent our money on the assumption that by that means we would save American lives. It was war budgeting, frankly so accepted.

Then this same administration, which is now asking for so much, demobilized our armed forces, destroyed billions of dollars of usable materials, drove tanks into the ocean, put our fleet in moth balls, sold salvage goods everywhere, left deserted dumps of supplies—and now it all is to be started all over again. And, unfortunately for us, it must be done all over again.

Meanwhile, the President wants to use our money to play politics as usual. So the items for Social Security, welfare and benefits rise in 1952 over 1951 by $100,000,000, although there certainly could be a cut, in view of the fact that we cannot afford luxuries at a time when the people are being taxed beyond their capacity to pay taxes. The Hoover Reports are ignored.

Similarly, the President advocates a vast increase in socialist power development, which not only adds to the citizen's tax burdens but takes off the tax roll government-owned corporations. These tax-free corporations, owned by the government, are luxuries which we cannot afford.

The most amazing fact about this budget is that it includes a concealed Brannan Plan which the President knows that the country and the Congress reject but which turns up constantly like a privately minted bad penny. Nobody has yet been able to estimate the actual cost of the Brannan Plan. To add that onto a war budget is sheer financial madness.

The constitutional responsibility for the budget is in Congress, not in the presidency. Congress cannot dodge this responsibility. It alone has the power of the purse and must stand before the electorate in 1952 to answer for its conduct. The wasteful expenditure of the taxpayers' money is unjustified at any time. It becomes criminal at a time of rising prices, depreciated currency and war expenditures.

Congress has the final word in all this and should speak loud and clear and with a sense of responsibility to the electorate.

DIET AND HEALTH

Early Care Important Here

By HERMAN M. BUNDESEN, M.D.
SOME diseases are serious in themselves; others are dreaded because of what they may lead to. Among the latter is a disorder known as polyposis of the colon, in which there is an overgrowth of the tissues of the large bowel. Unless this disease is recognized early and adequately treated, it almost always develops into malignant or cancerous growths.

Though the condition is apparently inherited, it does not appear to begin until adolescence. Symptoms seldom appear in those under 20 and may not develop before 40.

The overgrowth is not confined to one spot, but is scattered throughout the large bowel. Its possibility must always be suspected when there are such symptoms as frequent bowel movements containing pus and blood, and when there is a marked loss of weight and strength. During the annual health audit which every person should have, a search may well be made for the presence of polyps in the bowel.

May Be Detected
If the condition is present, it may be detected by examining the bowel through an instrument known as the sigmoidoscope which consists of a tube and a light. If the polyposis is seen in this way, X-ray examination is carried out which will show how widespread the condition may be.

Since this condition is a severe one and dangerous if neglected, it requires active treatment. The treatment which seems to find most favor is burning off of the polyps in the rectum by the process known as fulguration. Then the entire colon is removed by operation. If the operation is carried out promptly, the person's prospects of remaining permanently well are greatly increased.

Of course, there are many causes for frequent bowel movements with mucus and blood other than multiple polyposis. The same symptoms may occur in ulcerative colitis. Fortunately, this disorder is not a too frequent one, and with prompt diagnosis and treatment its dangerous effects may be warded off.

● FARM PRICE "FREEZE"—The farm bloc in both houses of Congress is moving in on the theory that the best defense is a good offense so far as keeping price controls off farm commodities is concerned.

House agriculture committee Chairman Harold D. Cooley (D, North Carolina, is the latest to put out a vigorous denial that the farmer is to blame for the rapid rise in retail food prices since the outbreak of the Korean war.

Basis for his argument is the claim that farmers have no control over prices of their crops once they leave the farm—that these are dictated purely by consumer demand as reflected on the commodity markets.

Senate agriculture Chairman Allen J. Ellender (D, Louisiana, earlier took much the same stand except he indicated that his group will go after the "middleman" in the food market system as the real "culprit" in the price rise.

Agriculture Secretary Charles F. Brannan has supplied fresh ammunition for the Senate-House leaders with a lengthy statement to the effect that food is a much better bargain today than it was before World War II. All of which adds up to the conclusion that it will be very hard to drive through Congress any amendment to the present price control law that would take out the provision exempting farm crops from control until they reach party levels.

● AIR TECHNIQUES—Because of experiences gained in the Korean war, air techniques seem to be forcing their way into every phase of warfare these days.

Now the Marines, traditionally an amphibious force, are considering the development of amphibious operations to eliminate the costly first phase of their ship-to-shore landing operations.

They would like to develop the use of helicopters and large cargo planes to make the initial landing in force and prepare the beachhead for conventional amphibious landings.

Plans already suggested would utilize 25 to 30-man helicopters, short-landing area cargo planes, parachutists, and troop-carrying submarines.

CHAPTER THIRTY-SIX
GAMADGE put the receiver down and walked slowly back into the study. Ames sat waiting for him, and greeted him with an inarticulate question and a frightened stare.

Gamadge came up to the table, picked up the little glass of brandy that had been ready for him so long, and drank half of it. He said, "It's all over, Mr. Coldfield. She's dead."

"Thank God."
"Venner killed her."
Ames seemed to collect his faculties. "Do you mean—will it all have to come out? Even now?"

"I'd better tell you what happened, then you can judge for yourself. I had two men watching him, as much to protect him as anything else; he met her in a little restaurant, and she seems to have saved out a dose of that poison and somehow managed to get it into his beer. She thought he'd drive away in his car and die in it, or in a traffic accident. Nobody at the restaurant would ever connect such a death with him or with her. But she still didn't quite realize how fast that stuff works. You'd think, after Sylvia Coldfield's experience—"

Ames said with a touch of his old dryness, "They'd spare my niece some of the details."

"Anyhow, she thought she'd get him started off in his car. I think he might have made it—far enough to answer her purpose; but I'd warned him. He felt that something was wrong with him, he remembered what I'd said, and he thought he was a dead man. In that moment he may even have believed what he hadn't allowed himself to believe before, that she was a poisoner already."

"What poison? He didn't know. He was going out fast, but he had time to strangle her and drive away. He drove into the traffic on the avenue—he was doped and dying, only knew enough to keep his foot down. Venner would never try any such ineffectual form of suicide as that."

"But was he—"
"If he weren't killed, he must have been badly smashed; he'd die of that dose before they ever thought of anything but shock and perhaps internal injuries. There'll be no autopsy, Mr. Coldfield, or if there is, they won't look for sleeping medicine. There'll be a terrific scandal, of course, and the case will be closed—a love affair, jealousy, an insane getaway. That's all," said Gamadge. "Her father and mother may never know that it might be worse."

Ames got himself to his feet. "You won't tell them?"
"There's no reason for me to tell them now. Your niece isn't a danger any more."

Ames looked down at the blue envelope. "You say you were looking for the others in that trunk?"
"Yes, and they may be there—safe enough. I don't believe she ever put them through the formalities of a safe-deposit box; a court order can get even a safe-deposit box opened. She may have destroyed them; last night I must have made her very nervous—anything out of the ordinary troubles a guilty conscience, and of course she was always nervous about Mrs. Glendon Coldfield. She would have let her go and been glad to see the last of her."

"Georgette has the key of that trunk. I—" he looked cloudily around him. "I shan't rest easy until they're found."

"Well," said Gamadge, "at least you can get rid of this one." Ames grimaced, tore the envelope into fragments, and cast them on the fire.

Gamadge left him gazing down at the charred paper in the grate, got himself out of the house and into his car, and drove away. What, he wondered, would the girl's wretched parents make of those clothes in the locked trunk? Years from now, perhaps, they would be found. Presents from Venner? And what would his client make of Susan Coldfield's end? But Gamadge knew that, of course. Tripped herself up, but who shoved her?

"They'll all wish they could give me a decoration," he told himself, "and nobody will ever dare to say so."

Some months later Gamadge was waiting in a downtown bar for a would-be client to meet him and show him an autograph letter. Leaning up at the bar and absorbing an old-fashioned, he noticed four young people in a booth who were having a fine time; two men and two pretty girls. One of the men detached himself from his party and came up to the bar.

"Mr. Gamadge; you wouldn't remember me."
"Mr. Smyth. How are you?"
"I'm all right, thanks. Mind if I talk a minute?"
"I don't know how you can bear to leave your friends over there," "Especially the redheaded one?" "I've been admiring her."

"Mrs. Smyth, if I ever get my degree."
"Congratulations; that's good news."
"Zelma and I had a little windfall, aged aunt died."

"I don't think I ought to condole in the circumstances. Tell me if I'm wrong, though," said Gamadge.

Sam pondered, then said, "Lots of changes since I saw you last."
"Yes."
"Coldfield house shut up. Gramp retired and lives in Florida. Zel and I have a little place in New York." He had turned grave.

"Gramp was shaken up by what happened, you know. More than we were. Zel and I got a little away from all that, you know; but Gramp—what I wanted to say was, I think he finally caught on to the capsule mystery."

Gamadge looked inquiring.
"So did I," said Sam. "Not at the time—impossible for me to guess. You must have thought me pretty dumb that night you were at the house."

"Far from it."
"Of course I don't know any details," said Sam. "Only the ones everybody knows. But I suppose Glendon Coldfield and his wife somehow got on to that affair with Venner. Zelma knew about it when it was going on."

"Really?" Gamadge was interested.
"And she told me after it all came out." Sam looked down into his drink. "She's pretty good about keeping secrets—Zelma is, I mean. Susie told her all about Venner, she was crazy about the guy for years, but she wouldn't marry him because he didn't have money. His business had gone down after his father died. He was a man who had to live a certain way, and he spent too much. So Zelma understood."

"I had an idea that he was like that."

That was the one that saved wear on the steel bread slicers, already installed at the bakery, and sent millions of housewives out looking for steel bread knives to use in the home.

For some reason, no one in government ever claimed authorship of that magnificent idea, but the creator is believed to have gone on later to the manufacture of flying saucers.

Try, Stop Me

One morning editor Harold Ross was concluding a conference with associates St. Clair McKelway and Mrs. E. B. White. "I'm worried about Wolcott Gibbs," confided Mrs. White. "He's dreadfully nervous, he has insomnia, he becomes panicky when he has to go out in the street, and he's begun to have a notion that somebody is following him."

"So what?" said Ross with a shrug. "That just makes him a member of the staff!"

Mrs. Abernathy, writing a letter to her mother, couldn't find a calendar, so she asked her husband, "Honey, have you any idea what day this is?" Mr. Abernathy looked up from his paper warily. He had gotten into trouble through just such an opening before, and he wasn't going to make the same mistake again. "I know it's our anniversary, darling," he lied gracefully.

"Because Susie wouldn't marry him? Anyhow, she left his letters with Zel after she got engaged to Jim Waterton."

"She did? Why?"

"I don't know, she was like that," said Sam. "Pathological, in a way, like wanting Zelma around after she got Jim Waterton away from her. Wanted me around, too, but not feeling about Susie the way poor old Zel felt about Waterton. I wouldn't play."

"So I gathered," said Gamadge. "It all made me very sore. What did you think about the two of them coming down that night to apologize?"

"I didn't understand it."

"First I thought it was some more pathology, but Zelma told me after the tragedy—Susie came down to get those Venner letters back."

Gamadge straightened, drank some of his old-fashioned, and lighted a cigarette. Then he asked, "That so?"

"Remember she made Zelma take her upstairs?"

"I remember, yes."

"The letters were in a little locked-up case Susie had, and it went into a pocket of her topcoat."

"Very interesting."

"She was going to have some kind of a showdown with him, I suppose, and it ended by his killing her. I felt very sorry for that unfortunate guy," said Sam.

"I feel sorry for Waterton, too."

"Oh, old Jim will recuperate. They're all abroad, you know, Coldfield and Waterton, all of them. What a bust-up, wasn't it? I'd come to realize that Susie was as cruel as the grave, but I—still, you only had to look at that portrait of her grandmother in the dining room to realize that the subject was a psychopath."

"There was cruelty there, yes. And you didn't think Susan's mother's influence was good, did you?"

"Well, no. But Susie was all right when we were children. At least I thought so; you never can tell what's going on in the human brain."

"I wish you'd give your sister a message for me, Mr. Smyth."

"Glad to, what is it?"

"Tell her I think she's admirable."

"Oh—you mean because she didn't give Susie away about Venner?"

"She had some provocation."

"Oh, Zel would never do that."

"I have the highest opinion of her."

"I'll tell her. You might like to know that she and the youngest doctor in her outfit are getting along quite well lately."

Gamadge was pleased. "I'm glad to hear it. I was rather afraid young Mr. Waterton would come around again."

"Afraid? That's good," Sam laughed aloud.

"I know he's very nice, but he's really too thick in the head."

"He did come around, and Zel was very sympathetic with him. But somehow that last night—well, I won't annoy you any more."

Susie finished his drink and they shook hands. "Just quietly remember me to Mrs. Glendon Coldfield if you see her."

"She'll like to hear from you."

Sam went back to his party. A small man carrying a briefcase came in to join Gamadge at the bar.

Woman In Top Defense Job Disobeys General On Length Of Work Day

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 26.—The sign over the door reads "Assistant Secretary of Defense." The room itself is huge, and the desk in it built to scale.

Behind that desk sits a diminutive woman, Anna Rosenberg, for whom Gen. George C. Marshall himself bought a special desk chair so her Cinderella feet would touch the floor.

"There was a big red leather chair behind the desk when I came here last November," explained Anna, who was Marshall's choice for one of the most important jobs in the world today, that of handling American manpower.

No woman, not even Former Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, has ever before held so important a post in the federal government.

"And my feet didn't touch the floor. But I was too busy to notice. But the general did," she continued.

"And he said 'Anna, you must get a chair that fits you. You must especially get one that fits your back. That is very important when you work so hard.'"

"So I told him I would get a new chair, but I never could get around to it. And about ten days later, a young man from his office came in with this chair, and said General Marshall had ordered it for me and that I was to use it.

"Honestly, he's the sweetest, most wonderful man in the world," said Anna of the secretary of defense, whose aides frequently describe him as "astute, great, brilliant," but hardly ever as "sweet."

But to Anna, he is sweet and wonderful and some one for whom you willingly work yourself to death. For Anna Rosenberg, suddenly thrust into one of the biggest jobs in the nation, has almost worked herself to death in the three months she has been in Washington, D. C.

Now she only works till 1, 2, 3 and sometimes 4 a. m. She no longer works the night through at the Pentagon, suddenly looking up to discover it is 6 or 7 a. m. She did that in the first weeks in Washington, when she was testifying before congressional committees daily on manpower problems.

"Then I would order a big pot of coffee," she told me, "and take a shower and get back into my same clothes and go up on the Hill to testify. I simply had to stay up all night to prepare for those hearings. There was so much I had to learn," and her voice held some of the desperation of those early weeks of urgency.

SCS GROWTH OUTLINED

Conservation For Entire U.S. Predicted By 1970

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26 — H. H. Bennett, chief of the Soil Conservation Service, predicts that basic conservation measure will be applied to all the nation's farmland by 1970.

The noted conservationist says he bases his forecast on "what has been done thus far and on the encouraging continued upward trend."

Bennett says that at the end of the first seven years of federal soil conservation work, in 1941, the SCS had directed conservation treatment of almost 27 million acres, an average of almost four million acres a year.

Then in 1942, Bennett says basic conservation measures were applied to more than five million acres in conservation districts. Finally in 1950, the same kind of treatment was applied to 26 million acres.

He says that as of June 30, 1950, about 20 percent of the national farmland conservation job was completed.

The SCS, Bennett points out, is speeding up the conservation job, partly because of the current mobilization and expansion of farm crop needs, but mainly because improved conservation practices are essential in war or peace.

THE GOVERNMENT conservation service, he says, is pushing for expansion of approved conservation measures by an annual rate of four percent of the total job during the next three years compared with last year's 2.7 percent of the total.

Nationally, Bennett says, this would mean an average annual rate of about 60 million acres surveyed for conservation measures needed, 50 million acres of farm land planned for conservation, and 40 million acres treated with needed conservation practices each fiscal year from 1952 to 1954.

Summing up, the SCS says: "This would be a goal well worth our utmost efforts to achieve. I feel it can be achieved, and that when that is done, progress can be still further increased."

"If we can do this, then the nation can be assured that the indispensable soil conservation job will be finished on time."

Law Is Lagging Behind Social Customs, Claim

CINCINNATI, Feb. 26 — A Cincinnati attorney contends that the law may have a far reaching long arm, but it is still one step behind social customs.

Lester A. Jaffe, discussing the legal aspects of blood grouping tests in paternity cases, told a University of Cincinnati audience that the law follows rather than precedes social custom. And social custom, he said, lags behind scientific development.

The UC professor of medical jurisprudence addressed alumni association members on "medical jurisprudence for the layman."

"Some of the courts," Jaffe said, "have taken the position that the determination of the issue of paternity cannot be transferred from the court room to the laboratory and have ruled that a jury may reject the findings of such tests."

"Other courts," he said, "have held that a jury cannot disregard the biological laws operative in blood grouping tests, but can only decide from the evidence presented whether the tests were properly administered."

Elinor Williams' Teen Tips

Date-time manners take the lead in today's queries from the mail. Is one of these problems yours?

"Should a girl call up a boy friend?" Ans.—Not unless she has a definite reason for doing so. Aimless calls without a reason make a bad impression on the boy and his family and sometimes embarrass him at home. He'll be more interested if he does the telephoning.

"How can the feeling of being afraid to eat in front of boy friends be overcome?" Ans.—Take it easy! Order a soft drink or a soda instead of food until you get acquainted and some of the shyness disappears. Check on your table manners; you'll have more confidence when you know they're correct. Then try to imagine that you're with your family and do as you normally would at the table, remembering that boys are shy, too, and they don't notice every bite as much as you think they do. Your date is probably very busy trying to overcome his own shyness and wondering if he's making a good impression on you.

"What are some good starting topics of conversation?" Ans.—It depends on where you are. Something concerning what you are doing is often a good starter... about the band at a dance... screen stars, if it's a movie date... records if you're at a friend's house, etc. Even the weather will do.

One girl says it's a good idea to begin with this when you meet a new boy. "So YOU'RE John Smith!", then he's intrigued and the chatter begins. Another girl asks a studious-looking boy if he plays basketball, "because he looks like an athlete" (this flatters him to pieces). Or, if he's big and athletic, she steers the conversation to school studies "because he looks as if he'd know about chemistry and things like that." She says that it's always such a novelty that it works.

For help with personal problems, write to Elinor Williams at this paper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for a reply.

Romania, Hungary Build Bristling War Machines

PARIS, Feb. 26—Intensification of military preparations in Romania and Hungary is a striking example today of the reason for the tension which U.S. Secretary of State Dean Acheson said last week the growth of the Soviet satellite armies is causing in Europe.

There is increasing evidence that the armies of both these countries are being built up far in excess of peace treaty limitations.

Yugoslavian Marshal Tito has publicly estimated that Romania now has 300,000 men under arms and Hungary about 165,000. Western Allied intelligence reports place the total number of Romanian and Hungarian forces at approximately 350,000.

Under peace treaty terms, Romania was restricted to an army of 120,000 men. Hungary was not supposed to have more than 85,000 under arms.

It is further reported that Moscow has ordered the Communist puppet regime in Budapest to produce by June of this year a total of one armored and eight infantry divisions. This would be four more divisions than it is estimated the Hungarian army now has organized.

Both the Romanian and Hungarian armies are being equipped with Russian weapons, though most of them are believed to be obsolete.

IN ADDITION to the strengthening of these two satellite armies, drastic measures have been taken in Romania and Hungary to speed up industrial rearmament.

A new emergency program was formulated in Hungary last month to accelerate armament production, develop substitutes for raw materials and apply strict economy in all branches of civilian industry.

Thousands of people are reportedly being transferred from administrative jobs to factory work.

Scores of plants are being transformed for military purposes and new armament factories are being constructed under disguised names.

For example, it is reported that tanks and armored cars are being built at a so-called agricultural plant in Jaszbereny. A "stove" factory in Salgotarjan is reportedly producing light arms and artillery.

Part of Hungary's biggest steel and machine factory at Diosgyoeri is being transformed to produce guns and other weapons. Armored trains are being built at a steel factory in Budapest.

Cost of the rearmament program is being financed in part by a so-called "peace" loan to which the workers are compelled to contribute.

A recent Hungarian government decree sharply restricted the use of private automobiles. Those who cannot prove urgent need for the use of their cars have been told they must sell them to the state at fixed prices.

NEW MILITARY training centers are reportedly springing up in both Romania and Hungary. A large one is reported to have been established in the Romanian Brasov region.

In Hungary, new military barracks have been erected in Ercsi; tank depots are being constructed near Esztergom, and a military airport is being developed on the island of Csepel. The Kossuth Academy in Tatavaro is being used as a training base of officers of armored units.

Western diplomats also have received reports that several Hungarian regiments were recently sent to Russia, presumably for training purposes.

Reorganization and expansion of the Hungarian army is being carried out by General Stephen Batta, who is assisted by a team of Russian staff officers.

There have been rumors that Soviet Marshal Malinovsky would soon take over control of Romania's armed forces in much the same manner as Marshal Rokossovsky has done in Poland. Malinovsky has already been made an "honorary" citizen of Romania.

Romania is considered to be of the most importance to Russia's war potential in Europe, strategically as well as from the standpoint of supply.

It provides the Soviet Union with its best route to south and southeast Europe. Its oil producing regions also furnish an important percentage of combustible supplies for the Soviet troops in Europe, as well as for the Russian Black Sea fleet.

IF RUSSIA WISHES to ease the tension in Europe, as Moscow has claimed she does in the various notes to the Western Powers concerning a conference on German demilitarization, the Allied governments consider it essential that the military preparations in the satellite states be drastically curtailed.

American diplomats particularly feel that the defense of Western Europe will not be assured by the demilitarization of Germany alone as long as there are nearly 1,500,000 men under arms in the Soviet satellite states.

It is for this reason that, as Acheson intimated last week, the Western Powers want the question of the rearmament of these satellite states included on the agenda of the proposed Big Four conference.

Who Says Press Has No Power?

EVORA, Portugal, Feb. 26—Francisco Caeiro, Evora industrialist, thanked the "power of the press" today for stopping his eight-day siege of hiccoughing.

Caeiro had been hiccoughing every three seconds through the eight-day span until a Lisbon newsman asked for an interview. The patient became so excited at the prospect that his hiccoughs stopped.

Dynamite Under Bed Jails Man

CHICAGO, Feb. 26—Thirty-year-old Charles Gilbert, who believes practice makes perfect, today began a 30-day jail sentence for storing 100 sticks of dynamite under his bed in a Chicago hotel.

Gilbert told Municipal Judge Eugene Holland he planned to boil the explosives and thus get experience to qualify for a munitions plant job.

Wee Footprints Startle Woman

CINCINNATI, Feb. 26—A Cincinnati woman went searching for a devil last night. Mickey Hamad, 29, told police she thought the devil himself had amused himself in her suburban Hyde Park apartment while she was gone. There were tiny pitch-black footprints which tracked the carpet, window sills and walls.

The startled woman found an even more startled squirrel cringing in a corner. Police say the animal climbed through a chimney, got its feet wet in the bathroom, and then was off to the races.

Only Limited Aid Can Be Given Abroad-Baruch

NEW YORK, Feb. 26—Elder Statesman Bernard M. Baruch warns that America "can furnish only limited aid to others and only to those nations willing to help themselves" in trying to preserve the peace. He said:

"The task of preserving peace is vast enough to enlist the resources and energies of all Democratic peoples."

"Collectively the nations of Western Europe do have the resources for adequate and effective defense—a greater population and a larger production of steel, coal and chemicals than Russia's."

"What is needed is to translate enough of these resources into immediate military readiness."

"I appreciate how harsh a time Europeans have had. But the Soviets, whose people endured even more, have ruthlessly chosen to put military power ahead of improving living standards."

"That challenge cannot be ignored. If what is required is not done now, infinitely more will have to be given up later. Everything might be lost under the heel of a Soviet occupation."

"For almost five years, since the last war's end, the Atlantic powers have put off a choice that cannot be evaded."

In attempts to recover the "Stone of Scone," an ancient Scottish relic, stolen from England's Westminster Abbey, the Scottish-English border was closed for the first time in 400 years.

Local Teams Begin Play This Week

Pickaway First On District Card

Three teams, cream of the 1951 Pickaway County basketball crop, will set out this week on the long, exciting trail toward fame.

They are Monroe Indians, Pickaway Pirates and New Holland Bulldogs, first, second and third place winners in that order during the 1951 Pickaway County basketball tournament.

Pickaway will be the first team to set out along the district tournament trail in Westerville.

Coach Bob Seward of Pickaway Sunday reached into the hat to pick a game against Utica for his team's 1951 district Class B opener.

The Pickaway-Utica contest is scheduled for about 7:45 p. m. Tuesday in Otterbein college gym, Westerville.

A TOTAL OF 35 teams have entered this year's "B" district eliminations. Pickaway County's chances of having a team advance into the regionals from the district are about one in six.

Clyde Plant of Monroe drew a "toughie" during Sunday's district matchmaking.

Monroe, winner of the Pickaway County tournament championship for the first time in the school's 25-year history, will be pitted against Bremen, winner of the 1951 Fairfield County tournament.

Monroe and Bremen are to meet at 4 p. m. Wednesday for their first tournament battle.

New Holland, third place in this year's tourney, drew what might be considered the best pick of the three local teams for its tourney opener.

Coach Bob O'Brien of New Holland drew his team against Holy Family of Columbus in its opener. New Holland finished this season with a record of 16 wins in 22 starts, while Holy Family has won only six in 19 attempts.

The New Holland-Holy Family tussle will begin at about 6:30 p. m. Thursday.

Complete schedule of tourney openers for the three top Pickaway County teams in this year's "B" tournament in Westerville, along with the records of both teams in parentheses, is as follows:

Tuesday
Pickaway (10-9) vs. Utica (10-9), 7:45 p. m.

Wednesday
Monroe (15-4) vs. Bremen (17-4), 4 p. m.

Thursday
New Holland (16-6) vs. Holy Family (6-13), 6:30 p. m.

Bremen Oilers Win Fairfield Tourney Title

More than 2,000 fans pushed into Pickaway Fairgrounds Coliseum Saturday night to watch the final session of the 1951 Fairfield County basketball tournament.

Emerging triumphant from the Fairfield finale was the Bremen Oiler aggregation, winner of the tournament title with a 56-43 victory over Millersport.

Liberty Union scored a heavy 67-48 victory over Pickerington cagers in an upset during the consolation game to take third place in the tournament.

But, even though Liberty Union upset the Pickerington team, this year's Fairfield league champs, it is Pickerington which will travel to the district "B" tourney.

Unlike Pickaway County's tournament setup, the Pickerington team, by virtue of its league win, was assured of a district tourney berth even before participating in the tournament.

BY VIRTUE of its championship, then, fourth-place Pickerington will travel to the tournament in Westerville while its conqueror, Liberty Union, will stay at home.

In the championship Millersport-Bremen test, Bremen opened the contest with an 8-7 first-period advantage, squeezing out a 22-19 lead at the half.

Millersport fell even further behind during the third round of the bout to trail by 39-31, while Bremen romped easily into the Fairfield championship during the final period with its 56-43 margin.

Paul Hockman of Bremen was high scorer in the title tilt with a total of 22 points, while Dave Broyles paced Millersport with 17 counters.

In the lopsided consolation contest, the favored Pickerington quintet opened with a 13-10 first period lead, although falling behind on a 37-23 halftime deficit.

Continuing its terrific scoring pace, Liberty Union racked up a 55-32 three-quarter mark lead and coasted into the victory by the final 67-48 margin.

Neal Underwood of Liberty was star of the contest with a total of 27 points to his credit, while Don Noble was high scorer for the Pickerington crew with a total of 17.

Bremen, Millersport and Pickerington are to begin play in the 18-team "B" tournament this week in Athens.

Three Pickaway Wrestlers Lose Out In Finals

Three Pickaway Township high school wrestlers advanced into the finals of an "open" mat meet Sunday in Columbus Central YMCA.

Earning berths in the finals were Herschel Brumfield in the 155-pound class; Bob Pennington in the 127-pound class; and Bob Stevens in the 112-pound class.

Matched against J. Mills, coach of the Columbus "Y", Brumfield lost out in the finals by pin in the first round.

Pennington was decided in the second round by 8-3 when pitted against Constantino of Wheeling, W. Va., while Stevens lost out by a pin in the second round of his match against R. Pritchard, also of Wheeling.

OTHER PICKAWAY Township wrestlers participating in the tourney were Ned Riffle, Don Pritchard, Elmer Winner, John Anderson, Tom Sharrett and Don Mosley.

Raymond Maxson of Saltcreek Township school accompanied the Pickaway lads to participate in the meet.

Next wrestling match on tap for Pickaway will be held in the Pickaway gym at about 7:30 p. m. Thursday, when the Columbus "Y" team invades.

Talbert, Chaffee Win Net Crowns

NEW YORK, Feb. 26—Veteran Billy Talbert and glamorous, young Nancy Chaffee reign today as the king and queen of national indoor tennis.

Talbert came from behind yesterday to whip Straight Clark of Pasadena, Cal., in five sets, 6-4, 6-8, 3-6, 6-2, 6-3, in the finals of the men's singles at New York's Seventh Regiment Armory.

Miss Chaffee, 22-year-old beauty from Ventura, Cal., retained the title she won last year by beating Beverly Baker, Santa Monica, Cal., 6-4, 6-4, in the women's finals.

Gard Expected To Testify On Basketball Fix

NEW YORK, Feb. 26—Little Eddie Gard, former Long Island university star, is expected to leave protective police custody today to testify before a New York grand jury in the college basketball fix scandal.

Gard, who has been held under guard at his own request since the scandal broke a week ago, was reported to have cooperated fully in questioning by District Attorney Frank S. Hogan's staff.

It was reported that Ed Roman, towering City College of New York center, also will appear before the jury. Roman is scheduled to appear at the district attorney's office to turn over $500 of the money paid him for fixing basketball games. Last Friday he turned over $2500.

Whether any of the other players involved in the scandal will face the grand jury was not known. They are LIU Stars Sherman White, Adolph Bigos and Leroy Smith, Ed Warner and Alvin Roth of CCNY, and Connie Schaff of New York university.

Hogan said all except Schaff have admitted accepting bribes from Salvatore Sollazzo, accused main fixer, through Gard, the purported middle man. Sollazzo is being held in the rigging of 10 basketball games in Madison Square Garden.

Fishing Licenses Due To Run Out

Pickaway County anglers have until Thursday to fish on their old licenses. After that date they must obtain new ones, according to Clarence Francis, local game protector.

He said the licenses are now on sale. The cost, $1.

Joe Walcott All Set For Bout With Ez

CAMDEN, N. J., Feb. 27—Perennial Jersey Joe Walcott left Camden today for Detroit where he has a date with Ezzard Charles, March 7, convinced that in this—his fourth try—he will lug home the heavyweight boxing crown.

He's still 37 years old. And, according to his manager Felix Bocchicchio, he's very much a contender, having looked extra sharp during the last four weeks of preliminary drills.

Walcott and his entourage, including Bocchicchio, Trainer Dan Florio, Sparring Partner Johnny Hubbard and Cook Dave Shockley, expect to reach Detroit around midnight and he will start intensive drills beginning tomorrow.

The challenger almost snared the elusive heavyweight bauble in his first try, but never came close in his next two attempts. The log for his three championship bouts shows:

Dec. 5, 1947; lost a split decision to Joe Louis.
June 25, 1948; kayoed by Louis in the 11th round.

June 22, 1949; lost the decision to Ezzard Charles, who was crowned the new heavyweight champion to fill the vacant throne left by Louis, who at the time had retired undefeated.

State Employment Service's Program Is Outlined Here

Local BUC Aide Tells Objectives

Workers, Employers Both Get Assistance

Every year many employers and job seekers ask officials of the Ohio State Employment Center of the Bureau of Unemployment Compensation this simple and direct question: "Just what are you trying to do to help me?"

"These questions indicate that not enough employers and workers are completely aware of the variety and extent of the public services available to them," according to C. C. Thomas, manager of the Cincinnati BUC office.

"Many people view Ohio's 82 employment centers as locations where, at taxpayers' expense, idle workers are referred to available jobs and everything falls into place like a jig saw puzzle," he said and added:

"Some others think of employment service personnel as being long on optimism, but short on results. Few such objections have some basis since obviously everyone cannot be helped to achieve fully his desired work."

The main objective of the bureau, according to Thomas, is to maintain a high level of employment stability in local communities throughout Ohio by bringing available workers to job openings with the maximum of convenience and the minimum of expense.

THE BUREAU ALSO makes a special effort to bring additional industrial activity to those areas having a surplus of workers.

Minimizing unemployment has its own special problems. There are always problems of recruiting qualified workers to fill specific job requirements, especially those calling for specialists. The same activity is carried on for those workers who are seldom employed—the so-called marginal workers who are not specialists and are consequently difficult to place in any labor market.

The bureau performs a valuable service of providing accurate labor market information concerning manpower availability throughout the state.

This information is vital to those businessmen who may locate additional factories in the state as well as Ohio employers. Much of the information is used in vocational guidance, schools, and counseling and testing programs.

Counseling and selective placements are additional services provided by the bureau for physically handicapped, older workers, young and inexperienced workers and those of all ages who simply are not sure of what kind of work they want to do. These services help these persons to make suitable job adjustments. Thomas explained:

"Often a local employment center tests particular job applicants and makes the scores available to employers interested in hiring that person. Tests are not only given for proficiency, typing, shorthand and spelling and various clerical aptitudes, but also a general aptitude test which includes among other items the determination of individual learning ability, special skills and manual and finger dexterity."

"THE OHIO BUREAU of Unemployment Compensation through its employment service and the affiliated services of other United States employment centers throughout the country can recruit specialized workers not available locally from other sections of the United States. In the same manner, workers with skills and specialties not marketable here can make their services available through this national network of some 1800 employment offices."

"Employers having trouble with job turnover and absenteeism can obtain help from the local employment center. The bureu's industrial service department can give assistance to these employers with these problems and others.

"Veterans are offered specialized help with on-the-job training or re-employment problems handled by counselors who have a particular aptitude and special training to assist veterans."

"For housewives or employers who need extra help for short periods of time on short notice, the bureau handles a pool of both male and female day workers."

"In the Summer, special attention is given by the bureau's farm placement service in the planting, cultivating and harvesting of all kinds of crops."

"Please remember that your local employment center of the BUC is operated by your state government to help you with your employment problems. You can help it offer you better services by giving it an opportunity. Let your local employment center know your problems. It may be able to help you find just the job you have been looking for. Or, it may help you to fill the job openings you have for a specially qualified person."

Sub-Killing Sub To Be Launched By Navy Friday

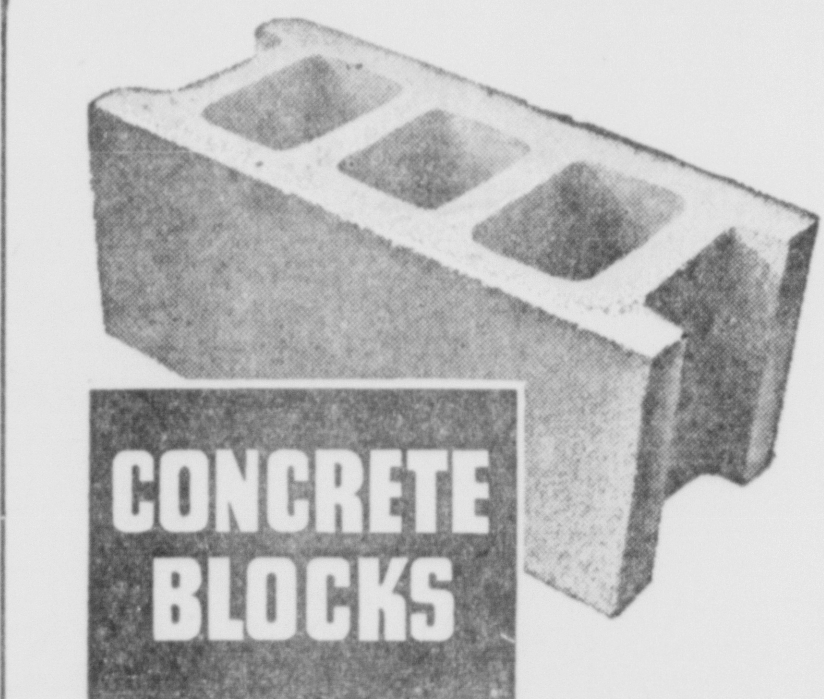

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26 — The Navy announced today that its first postwar submarine designed to hunt and kill other submarines will be launched at Groton, Conn., Friday.

An anti-submarine submarine has been a top priority project with the Navy since the war. With it, the Navy hopes to be capable of waging true undersea warfare, effectively bolstering its "hunter-killer" operations against enemy submarine craft.

The new ship, built by the Electric Boat Co., is 195 feet long and displaces 750 tons, compared to a length of 311 feet and 1,500 tons for present fleet type submarines. Other details are not reported.

Mrs. Willis Manning Thomas, widow of the commander of the Submarine Pompano in World War II, will sponsor the new craft. Cmdr. Thomas received the Navy Cross, the Silver Star and other medals for the Pompano's exploits, which included sinking ten enemy ships totaling 42,000 ships and damaging four others totaling 55,300 before she was lost.

Kres asserted the union would consider such a committee "nothing more than an attack upon our union and the working people of Ohio."

Lonely Hearts Killers Nearing Final Days In Sing Sing Prison

OSSINING, N. Y., Feb. 26 — Two of the most repulsive criminals in modern crime annals are nearing the end of the trail in the Sing Sing death house.

The Lonely Hearts Killers, slinky Raymond Martinez Fernandez and fat Martha Beck, will die in the electric chair at 11 p. m. Thursday, March 8. They have exhausted all legal appeals and the execution has been ordered by the court of appeals. Executive clemency by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey would be the only other possible action.

Fernandez, a 36-year-old Hawaiian-born Spaniard, and his 31-year-old paramour who hails from Pensacola, Fla., have been in the Sing Sing death house since August, 1949. They originally were sentenced to die Aug. 31, 1950, but the executions were delayed pending an unsuccessful appeal to the U. S. Supreme Court.

Mrs. Beck and Fernandez were convicted in New York Aug. 18, 1949, of murdering Mrs. Janet Fay, an Albany, N. Y., widow. They also confessed killing Mrs. Delphine Downing, another widow, of Byron Center, Mich., and her infant daughter.

They met their victims through "lonely hearts" correspondence clubs.

Mrs. Fay, who was 66 years old and had an attractive bank account containing $7,000, was bludgeoned and strangled in an apartment leased by the pair in Valley Stream, L. I. Her body was found buried in the cellar of a house in Queens after her daughter became suspicious and reported her disappearance to police.

The killers, meanwhile, had already left for Michigan, where Fernandez paid rapid court to Mrs. Downing. In both cases, Mrs. Beck presented herself as his sister.

Fernandez had persuaded his new fiancée to sell her house and turn over most of her money to him when she suddenly became suspicious. The pair then persuaded her to take some sleeping pills, and shot her when the pills failed to kill her.

They buried Mrs. Downing's body in the cellar of her home. The next day they killed and buried the 20-month-old child.

But neighbors, puzzled by the unusual goings-on, called relatives of Mrs. Downing and they, in turn, called police. The cops walked in just as the killers were preparing to leave.

In Fernandez' pockets they found a large amount of money taken from the two widows, plus a list of 132 more lonely hearts. He had put check marks after 14 names.

The two confessed the kill-
